REAL QUEEN WATCHES MIMIC COURT IN ACTION

King George's Consort Admires
Louis XIV Pageant Ball at Albert Hall.

SUFFRAGETTES WERE QUIET

Mrs. John Astor as Mme. de
Maintenon, Lady (Arthur) Paget and Lady Newborough Prominent.

[By Cable to The Tribune.]
London, June 6.—The spirit of Louis XIV filled Albert Hall last night, when the Versailles ball took place in the presence of Queen Mary, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Arthur and Princess Patricia of Connaught, the Battenbergs, the Schleswig-Holsteins and other royalties. The hall was decorated with gold in the cipher of the French King and with mimic crowns on a white ground, while at one end, on a throne under a blue canopy, with fleur-de-lis, King Louis sat with his consort, surrounded by five hundred society folk, forming a mimic court of the seventeenth century.

The hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, in golden coat and blue robes of state, played Louis, while the Countess of Dudley was Queen Marie Therese. The famous beauties Viscountess Curzon, Mrs. John Astor and Lady Diana Manners were, respectively, Mesdames de Montespan, de Maintenon and Louise de la Vallière.

The processions passed amid outbursts of applause, and even the Shakespeare ball did not approach in beauty and magnificence this great charity fête.

A flurry of alarm was perceptible when the Queen arrived, lest the suffragettes might choose the occasion for another outrage, but they made no attempt to spoil the evening, and the Queen, with evident delight, watched the stately court of Louis XIV and afterward the make-believe kings and queens of France and England.

The hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Countess of Dudley, Harry Lindsay and the Countess of March were commanded to sup with the actual Queen.

Pavlova and her troupe, all in pink and white, danced the historic gavottes, surrounded by the courts of the world.

Lady (Arthur) Paget again won laurels for arranging the court of France, and Mrs. John Astor defied rivalry in a dress of classic design of white satin, touched with blue and with just the suggestion of Diana's bow and arrow and crescent. She courted comparison with Lady Curzon, who also wore white and blue and stood by Mrs. Astor.

Lady Diana Manners, in genuine seventeenth century pink brocade, entered under a high parasol carried by a negro, and caused a sensation for youth and originality.

Lady Alington's Russian quadrille was an enormous success, as the splendor of the gowns and jewels won approval from the Queen herself. Lady Alington wore blue, Mrs. Hwfa Williams was brilliant in black and silver, and Mrs. W. B. Leeds, who was in the French court, wore crimson brocade and splendid diamonds.

Lady Garvagh, in pink brocade, had the Denmark quadrille, and the effect was heightened by the introduction of some Great Danes.

The Duke of Manchester walked with Lady Yarborough in the Russian pageant.

Prince Paul of Serbia was the Dauphin.

Lady Newborough (formerly Grace Carr) also led a quadrille and was one of the most admired of the thousand or more participants.

TIMOTHY COLE IN ACADEMY

His Election Leaves Only One
Vacancy in Membership.

Timothy Cole, the wood engraver, has just been chosen a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, of which William Dean Howells is president and in which there now remains but a single vacancy in the membership of fifty.

In addition to the representatives of literature and music the roll of the Academy includes these well known names in the department of art: In painting, La Farge, Winslow Homer, Abbey, Millet, Alexander, Blashfield, Brush, Chase, Cox, Sargent, Thayer and Vedder; in sculpture, Saint-Gaudens, Ward, Herbert Adams, Bartlett and French; in architecture, McKim, Hastings, Mead and Post.

The selection of Mr. Cole is a recognition of his achievement in a form of art in which the superiority of American artists has long been acknowledged, though of late years it has almost fallen into disuse.

SYNOD IN 107TH SESSION

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]
Asbury Park, N. J., June 5.—The General Synod of the Reformed Church in America, the oldest Protestant denomination in the United States, began its 107th annual meeting here this afternoon. There were present 200 delegates, many of them from Western states. The Rev. Dr. William Patterson Bruce, of Yonkers, president of the General Synod, opened the meeting, and to-night delivered the annual synodical sermon.

The afternoon session was devoted to the election of officers. The Rev. Dr. James S. Kittell, pastor of the First Reformed Church, Albany, was chosen president, and the Rev. Dr. Henry J. Vedman, of Holland, Mich., was chosen vice-president. Other officers elected are: Clerk, the Rev. Dr. William H. De Hart, of Plainfield, N. J., and permanent clerk, the Rev. Dr. Henry Lockwood, of East Millstone, N. J.

The constitutional revision committee will recommend no radical changes in the church law, which was drafted by the Synod of Dort in 1619. The report of the committee on the state of religion will show that the Reformed Church has made great gains during the last year.

ACTRESS DENIES ASSAULT

Ruth Langford Pleads Not Guilty, but Is Held.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]
Newburgh, N. Y., June 5.—Pleading not guilty to the charge of assault in the second degree against her by Miss Elizabeth Eismann, of New York City, Mrs. Ruth Langford, actress, was held to-day before the action of the Ulster County grand jury this afternoon. She waived examination when she arraigned before Justice of the Peace William Atkins, at New Paltz. The defendant was held in $1,000 bail, and she put up the required amount in cash.

At the hearing this afternoon the prisoner, who was arrested in New York City on May 29, was represented by Henry Kohl, of Newburgh, who appeared for Burton W. Gibson at his last trial. The case before Justice Atkins to-day is the outgrowth of an episode at the Mountain House, at Lake Mohawk, where the complainant and defendant were guests.

"ALL ABOARD"

Gay, Colorful Show at Lew Fields's Roof Garden.

The two-act musical panorama "All Aboard," book by Mark Swan, lyrics by E. Ray Goetz, music by Mr. Goetz and Melvin Franklin, which opened the Forty-fourth Street Roof Garden last night, is all that can possibly be desired in the way of a summer show. It is constantly amusing, full of movement, gay colors, songs and dances, and the principals are supported by a chorus that is not only good to look upon but excellently trained. The costumes, designed by Melville Ellis, are notable for the daintily harmonious use of bright colors; there are several new scenic effects, all duly protected by patents at home and abroad—in short, eye and ear are pleasantly entertained from first to last.

What plot there is was outlined in these columns last Sunday. It has been devised for the purpose of furnishing incessant changes of scene as Jan van Haan (Lew Fields), the Dutch sailor, dreams that he, as commander of a world ocean liner, takes his ship on a world tour. The stage pictures of Spain, the Sierras, Holland and China are really beautiful. There is also a scene devoted to a very funny sketch of what will happen "when women rule" and men have become the weaker sex—in short, it is not all plain sailing for Jan van Haan from the moment he discovers that he has a company of circus freaks aboard, with whom a very aggressive lady (George W. Monroe) refuses to sit down at table. Jan also gets mixed up with a fair nihilist, who becomes a Spanish lady with a jealous love later on, and, again, he and his companions pose for moving pictures of an invading Japanese army in California, the natives mistaking them for the real article. And when Jan reaches Tulip Land, after ten years of wandering, his reception is worse than that of Rip van Winkle.

Lew Fields and Mr. Monroe head a long cast, which includes also Lars O. O'Shea, Zoe Barron, Louis and Clara Carter, Dr. Haxton, Will Philbrick, Stephen Maley, Ralph Riggs and Kathryn Wittich, Vania Fitzhugh and Dolly Connelly, whose song, "Somebody's Coming to My House," with its elaborate chorus and business, was one of the hits of the evening. Other pretty numbers were "Serena," sung by Miss Barnett, and "In a Garden of Eden for Two," which was encored four or five times. The credit for the excellent staging of the piece belongs to William J. Wilson and W. H. Post. "All Aboard" has come to stay with us for the summer.

The new roof garden is a prettily decorated place, cool in effect with its soft green and white coloring and its masses of wisteria.

BENEFIT PLAY AT CASINO

Special Matinee to Aid Gilbert and Sullivan Public Library Fund.

At the special matinee performance of "Lolanthe," yesterday at the Casino Theatre for the benefit of the Gilbert and Sullivan New York Public Library Fund, De Wolf Hopper made a speech in his usual humorous vein, explaining the need of the fund, and introduced several speakers who were to address the audience.

The speakers were Edward Fales (a new speaker), who dwelt particularly on the librettos of Gilbert; John Philip Sousa, of "Sullivan as a Composer"; Sydney Ross, of "Sullivan as a Dramatist"; and William T. Carleton, the friend of both Gilbert and Sullivan, who told half a dozen anecdotes, and Bourke Cockran, who concluded his speech with a hearty endorsement of the purposes of the fund. Proceeds from this and all other performances will go to the fund, which will purchase a complete library of information on Gilbert and Sullivan.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

For the first time in her career as a musical comedy star, Fritz Scheff will give a midweek matinee Wednesday afternoon. She will appear in a popular priced performance of "Mlle. Modiste" at the Globe. This will be her "contribution to the present campaign for music at lower prices."

The engagement of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" at the Hudson will close with its 163rd performance Saturday night. An animal show is the latest addition to the attractions at Luna Park.

V. Nat Rousset will present for the first time a one-act dramatic sketch, "Temperament," by Ede Dudge, next Sunday at the Hart House. It is intended to serve as a lesson for the stage-struck girl. The cast includes John Parks, late leading man of the Metropolitan Opera House; June Mathis, former leading woman of Julian Eltinge's "Fascinating Widow" at Avila Sanchez, recently featured in Richard Carle's production, "Officer 666."

One of David Belasco's productions for next season will be a play by Roland H. Moxley, who was twice tried for murder and spent many months in the death house at Sing Sing. The play will make an appeal for furrier reform, and will probably be produced in this city early next fall.

BARNARD SENIORS LOOK BACK OVER HISTORY

Graduating Class Manages to Make Merry, Despite Solemnity of Occasion.

WOES OF 1913 RELATED

Unlimited Cuts and Hazing
Among the Losses Deplored by Viola Turk in
"Our Black Cat."

Columbia's big gymnasium was crowded yesterday with proud parents and admiring friends, who went to see the "sweet girl graduates" of Barnard hold their class day.

A great part of the afternoon was spent in marching in and out with such a loud and dignified men that each girl had to pose on one foot for a considerable part of a minute before putting the other down.

First on the programme was the salutatory, by Gertrude Morris. It's class president, who said that, although the class came with "eyes ready to sprinkle the daisies with which the room is decorated with emotional dew," still they would try their best to be entertaining.

Kitten Proves Good Actor.

"Our Black Cat," by Viola Turk, caused unending amusement by dealing with the loss of the thirteen lives—it was an exceptional cat, being "13s"—through the misfortune of that class. A huge basket that accompanied Miss Turk to the front of the platform contained a tiny black kitten, which was actor enough to move appreciatively at the applause.

The thirteen lives were lost, the speaker said, by the loss of privileges which all the other classes had had before "13s" came to college. "Each new thing," she asserted, "was tried on the dog and felt by the cat," whereat she popped a tiny pistol and stroked the "unlucky feline" in sympathy over the loss of unlimited cuts for the seniors. Other lives were lost when Latin prose, that dreaded horror, was not required the year after "13s" took it; when mysteries, the Barnard way of hazing, were forbidden when "13s" became sophomores, and when they lost Greek games because, it was presumed, the Roman nose of the bulldog ("13s" class mascot) offended Diana. Another catastrophe occurred when "13s" elected Dean Gildersteel honorary member of the class, and the sixth life of this animal was lost when his dean rejected him.

Finally, the unlucky feline gave up his last life when the Phi Beta Kappa of "13s" went to the oration, as newly made Phi Beta Kappas had never been allowed to do, and the cat, not believing in Greek Letter societies there were screams of mirth from the anti-fraternity advocates went to the oration and came away with one less life than usual—the last. He got a degree of B. S., meaning bad specimen, from his college career.

Anna Saltzman gave the presentation to the classes. To "13s" a mustard plaster for weakness in sisterly affection; to "14s" a tape measure to measure their importance accurately; to "16s" a huge Phi Beta Kappa key so they might turn to worthy things, and to "13s" the first prize for "carefully and consistently abstaining from doing the 'turkey trot'."

Painful revelations of the characters of the girls of "13s" were made by Edith Halfpenny in the gifts to the class.

Plans for a New Building.

Priscilla Lockwood read the class poem, after which Naomi Harris delivered "13s" suggestions and plans for a new building which embodied using the chapel at Union Seminary, and instead of sharing the Teachers College tank and paying enormous sums a year for it, using several little bathhouses on Riverside Drive.

The class gift to the college was announced to be a new drinking fountain on the campus.

Last on the programme came the valedictory, delivered by Helen M. Dana, this year's undergraduate president at Barnard, and rang with loyalty to the college, ending with the pledge of everlasting memory to alma mater.

The Palisades song followed this, the seniors' last farewell to the college, and then the throng crowded out to the Barnard campus, where an informal reception was held.

The senior dinner followed the afternoon events. It was held in the college theatre, which was filled with tiny tables, decorated gaily with green and white, "13s" color. Singing and speeches lasted until late into the night, when farewells for the season closed the senior festivities.

The class day committee was made up of Mary W. Stewart, chairman; Helen M. Dana, Edith Halfpenny, Naomi Harris, Eleanor Berger, Anna Saltzman, Aline Stern, Gertrude Morris, Louise Butting.

This year's class contains an unusually small percentage of engagements, all save three of the 130 young women declaring themselves heart free. At the class dinner last night the secretary read the roll, and each girl had to answer to her name either "guilty" or "not guilty," "guilty" in this case meaning that the young woman had decided to add to her name another.
